Global Health Program

Message from Executive Director

Duke Kunshan University's global health programs consist of two major components – MSc in Global Health Program and the Global Health Research Center. The MSc in Global Health Program aims to create a vibrant community that is known world-wide for its academic excellence and its impact on helping to meet the global health challenges of today and tomorrow and to reduce health inequity worldwide, especially in China, neighboring Asian countries, and other low and middle-income countries.
