Your education in global health can take you in many directions. It starts at Duke Kunshan.

Health is global and global health is local. As the world becomes increasingly interconnected and health issues cut across national boundaries, opportunities within the field of global health are expanding. The Master of Science in Global Health (MScGH) at Duke Kunshan University is modeled after the highly successful Master's Program at Duke University -- one of the first programs of its kind in the United States. Our Duke Kunshan program graduates receive a in Durham, NC USA.

Our vision is to create a vibrant community that is known worldwide for its academic excellence and its impact in helping to meet the global health challenges of today and tomorrow and to achieve health equity worldwide, especially in China, neighboring Asian countries, and other Low- and Middle-income Countries. We achieve our vision through our mission of training the next generation of global health researchers
