Global Health Research Center (GHRC) builds up strong partnerships with different institutions in China and elsewhere through a number of ongoing projects. This rich network of local knowledge, combined with a regional perspective, is what makes GHRC so unique, relevant and influential.

Duke Kunshan University (DKU) has been selected by the Asia Pacific Observatory (APO) on Health Systems and Policies as a Research Hub for health policy and system research. The APO is hosted in WHO's Western Pacific Regional Office.

The research hub is led by Prof. Shenglan Tang, associate director for DKU and China initiatives at the Duke Global Health Institute (DGHI) and founding director of the Global Health Research Center at DKU. The DKU research hub is one of the three (Duke Kunshan University, Peoples Republic of China, The University of Tokyo, Japan and
