Duke Kunshan global health researchers participated in the Lancet-CAMS Health Summit, organized by the Chinese Academy of Medical Sciences (CAMS) and The Lancet, in Beijing on Oct. 27th and 28th, 2018. Two Duke Kunshan research projects were presented at this summit, where five global health and environment research projects were presented in poster format, one of which won the Best Poster Award.

Prof. Shenglan Tang, Executive Director for Global Health Programs at Duke Kunshan University, and his research team for the project “Equity in health care after 10 years of the New Rural Co-operative Medical Insurance Scheme in China: an analysis of national survey data” were invited to present their research report at the summit. This research project used three National Health Service Surveys to analyze the changes in health service utilization, financial burden, and health status of the individuals insured by the New Rural Co-operative Medical Insurance Scheme during 2003-2013.
